

TRIXY IS NEWEST PET OF KEEPERS AT ZOO

Arkansas Black Wolf Recognizes Former Master, Who Visits Her After Five Months.

Keepers at the National Zoological Park have a new pet, an Arkansas black wolf, that is as docile and playful as any domestic pup.

The animal is a great favorite with visitors because of its friendliness and has won unusual interest from the zoologists because of an unmistakable display of lasting affection and memory for a former master.

The animal was captured when two weeks old by Ralph C. Huey, supervisor of the Arkansas National Forest. He took it to his home, where it was named Trixy. At first shy, the little animal was trained as a domestic pet and raised in the family. She was taught canine tricks and canine discipline.

Last September, however, when Trixy was nearing maturity, Mr. Huey decided not to keep her as a pet about the house any longer, for fear of an outcropping of family traits, and he sent her to the National Zoo. A week ago Mr. Huey came to Washington to attend the conference of national forest supervisors. Sunday he determined to go to the Zoo to visit Trixy.

He was greeted noisily. Trixy spotted him from afar, and let out yelps that started the whole pack. As Mr. Huey went into the cage Trixy leaped upon him with loud yelps of joy, the scene attracting many Sunday visitors. Trixy was disconsolate when he left. Visitors to the park were curious, and Mr. Huey told them that though aged, Trixy was still as docile as he, and that he had not seen the animal for five months.

Though familiarly known in her native habitat as a timber wolf, Trixy is strictly speaking in the coyote family, and is so known to the scientists. She has a distinctive dark collar that is almost solid black.

OLINGER FOUND DEAD IN LOUISVILLE HOTEL

Oscar Ray Olinger, nineteen-year-old student of the Gallaudet College, for whom a country-wide search was instituted by the Washington police last yesterday, was found dead in the Seelbach Hotel, Louisville, Ky., several hours later. The student, whose mind is supposed to have been unbalanced by overstudy, disappeared from Gallaudet College on Sunday.

Young Olinger carried with him a suitcase well equipped with clothing and money. He took his overcoat and a dress suitcase with him, and left the impression that he was going to his home in Nashville, Tenn. After failing to find the young man the college authorities asked the local police authorities to take up the search. Several hours later a telegram saying that young Olinger had been found dead in Louisville, apparently suicide, was received by the Gallaudet authorities.

Olinger was the son of Charles Olinger, of 510 Grove avenue, Nashville.

PARTIAL ECLIPSE OF SUN OBSERVED HERE

People in Streets With Smoked Glasses See Moon's Shadow on the Orb.

For a period of a little more than a minute today the sun was working only half time, and for more than two hours it turned off a part of its light and hid behind the moon.

A partial eclipse of the sun was responsible for the light of day being sent to other worlds in greater quantity than it was to the earth. The eclipse commenced at 11 minutes past 10, and continued until 23 minutes past 12. Smoked glasses made it possible for observers in the streets to see the shadow of the moon slowly work its way across the shining surface of the orb of day and then disappear with equal deliberation.

At about the same time the first dark rim appearing on the surface of the sun was visible here, the entire surface was beginning to dim at a point 1,000 miles off the west coast of Mexico. In Colombia and Venezuela the light of the sun was shut off entirely for a short time by a total eclipse. The pathway of the total eclipse was southeast and then it turned in a rather curious fashion and went northeast until the path of totality ended at Guadalupe Island, off Cape Fear, on the coast of Ireland.

Somebody Takes Wilson's New Gloves As Souvenirs

A CHILD DOESN'T LAUGH AND PLAY IF CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! Is tongue coated, breath feverish and stomach sour?

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver, bowels.

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleaning" is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any ailment.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—Adv.

Uncle Harry Explains Workmen's Compensation

"WHAT is workmen's compensation?" asked Joe.

"Will you explain it to us, Uncle Harry?" asked Jimmy.

"Every few days I see something about it in the newspapers, and I don't understand it."

"He glad to, boys," said Uncle Harry. "Workmen's compensation means a plan for compensating, or paying, workmen who are injured while at work, and paying the families when the men are killed."

"Is there a national law on it?" asked Joe.

"Yes, there is a Federal, or national, workmen's compensation law, which was passed by Congress in 1908, but this only provides compensation for certain classes of men who are employed in doing United States Government work," said Uncle Harry.

"There are also many State laws. Altogether thirty States, and two of the Territories, have workmen's compensation laws. During 1915 the State legislatures of Colorado, Indiana, Maine, Montana, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Vermont, and Wyoming, and the territorial legislatures of Alaska and Hawaii, passed compensation laws.

In 1914 Louisiana and Maryland adopted the plan, and in 1913 these States passed compensation laws. Connecticut, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada, New York, Oregon, Rhode Island, and West Virginia. In 1912 Arizona, Michigan, and Rhode Island adopted the plan, and in 1911 the first State laws in the country were adopted in New Jersey, California, Illinois, Kansas, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Ohio, Washington, and Wisconsin. These State laws are for practically all workmen in the States having the laws."

"Do you mean, Uncle Harry, that if a workman, living in any one of these thirty States, is injured while at work he will be paid something every week until he is able to go back to work?" asked Jimmy.

"That's the idea," said Uncle Harry. "and if he is killed his family is paid a certain amount of money in one sum, or so much a week for a certain number of weeks, or, of course, boys, the State laws are different in some particulars, such as the number of weeks an injured man receives pay, but the plan of workmen's compensation is practically the same in all parts of the country."

"How does this money come?" asked Joe.

"The insurance companies," said Uncle Harry. "although in California, Pennsylvania, and some of the other States, the State governments have their own insurance departments and many of the employers get the insurance for their employees through these State departments."

"Let me explain the insurance idea, boys, and then you will understand this compensation plan better. According to insurance companies are companies that will pay a man, if he is hurt, a certain sum of money every week, or they will pay him all the money in one sum, if he prefers. If he first agrees to pay to the company as much every three months or every year, just as you boys pay dues in your club. That's what is called accident insurance."

"Then there is what is called life insurance. A company that sells life insurance will agree to pay a man's family a certain sum of money when he dies, if he will pay the company so much a certain regular time every year from the time he agrees to take the insurance up to the time of his death."

"Now, as you know, there are many kinds of work that are very dangerous, and thousands and thousands of men are killed and injured every year right here in peaceful United States. Some
